For my final landing page, I want to create a page that anyone can understand. For this, I want to create a minimalist interface where there are simple lists of content so that anyone can navigate and understand where to click and what content is available to view. I want a very clean interface, without distractions, so that the viewer can focus on the content and links. Lastly, with the switch from desktop to mobile, I want it clean enough to where there is minimal alterations when transitioned to the next device. This way, everything, including the functional links and text can stay in coordination with the desktop version to minimize confusion.
